INDIANAPOLIS BUSINESS UNIVERSITY,

(Bryant & Stratton and Indianapolis Business Colleges, Consolidated 1885.)

Acknowledged the Leading Business, Shorthand and Preparatory School.

The University supports its claim to superiority by the extent and thoroughness of its course of study and the success of its graduates in the different avenues of life,

It has the facilities it advertises, and meets the expectation of its patrons by the honest fulfillment of every promise.

Business Education pays. It bestows self-reliance, ensures profitable employment, assists capital, builds fortunes, establishes independence and leads to distinction. Success depends most on the ability to do. Education and skill are the universal requirements. The youth and men of to-day who come to the front must have strong heads and trained hands. Opportunities come to him who is prepared to act. Get ready; there is important work for you. The young people of to-day must soon hold the affairs of the business world in their hands. Those who are the best prepared will be found in the highest places. The Business University has the confidence and patronage of men who employ skilled help.

Shorthand and Typewriting have become indispensable factors in the daily operations of every line of trade and enterprise. Constant and remunerative employment and direct lines of promotion are open to persons who have this skill. Shorthand as taught at the Business University can be learned by any person who has energy, ambition and a fair knowledge of correct pronunciation and spelling. Young ladies are specially adapted to this line of work, and there is certainly no more agreeable or profitable employment for girls who, from choice or necessity, have to earn a living. This qualification is not utilized in business houses alone, but lawyers, editors, authors, railroad officials, bankers and others appreciate the necessity and value of the stenographer, and the call for competent help of this character is greater than the supply. There is also a growing demand for stenographers who understand book-keeping and have a general business education. For Type-writer practice the Institution is well equipped with the leading machines.

The Writing Classes are under the direction of skillful penmen and most successful teachers. Our success in this specialty is attested by hundreds of students whom we have taught to write a rapid business hand.

Attend the Best. Waste no time in a "cheap school." Such places make weak students. If you would grow strong and prepare yourself for the best positions, attend an institution that commands the respect and confidence of the best business men. The Business University is progressive and prosperous, and has the best facilities known to business educators.

Terms of Admission. No entrance examination is required. Students enter any time for Selected Branches or Full Diploma course, receive class and individual instruction six hours daily and advance independently in their work. The time and expense for a complete course depends upon the education, aptitude and application of the student.

We extend our hearty thanks to the students and friends of the University who have kindly aided us in securing patronage by their generous endorsement and faithful representation of our work. We shall continue with steadfast effort to promote the welfare of every student, hoping to receive a still larger patronage from those who desire to obtain a sound business education for themselves or their friends.

Visitors always Welcome. Everybody is cordially invited to call and examine our course of study and superior facilities for thorough business training. After a visit to the institution we are confident you will place a higher estimate on business education and take a deeper interest in the work and success of the Indianapolis Business University.

FORTIETH VOLUME.

INTRODUCTORY.

In presenting this, the fortieth volume of the Directory of the City of Indianapolis, the publishers, with some degree of pride and satisfaction, call attention to the handy size of the volume and its clear, compact, artistic and beautiful typographical appearance. The city has had a surprisingly vigorous growth during the past twelve months and the effort of the publishers has been to make in this volume a full showing of all names that belong to a work of this character, and at the same time to keep the greatly augmented list from making a book too bulky for convenient reference. This volume for 1894 will show for itself how successfully this has been done.

POPULATION.

Notwithstanding the business depression of the last half of 1893 the population of Indianapolis again shows a satisfactory increase. This is accounted for by the fact that the ill effects of the financial stringency touched this city more lightly than elsewhere. The number of the unemployed was never in as large proportion to the population as in other cities of the country, while the cost of living—food, rent and fuel—has always been low.

The Directory of 1893 contained 55,025 names; this Directory contains 57,598, an increase of 2,573 names. Allowing two and a half in population to the name, which is a very conservative estimate, and one which in past years has been found to tally closely with the census—the increase for the year has been 6,422, and the population as shown by the Directory of 1894 is 143,995, or, in round figures, 144,000. This includes, of course, the immediate suburbs of Indianapolis, which are as much a part of it as if they were under the same municipal government, as they should be, as they depend upon Indianapolis for their existence.

At the present rate of increase it is plainly to be seen that the population of this city less than six years hence, at the beginning of the year 1900, will be more than 200,000. It is, however, not unlikely that this figure will be greatly exceeded, the rapid development of Indiana as a manufacturing State being of direct benefit to this city, with its superior advantages in cheap living, abundance of common labor, central location and admirable facilities as a shipping point.

"THE CITY OF HOMES."

A few years ago the name of "The City of Concentric Circles" was given to Indianapolis. Before this it had been long known as the "Railroad City;" but for several years the name most frequently applied to it, especially by visitors, is "The City of Homes," a designation it is pre-eminently entitled to wear. In no city of the Union is wealth more evenly distributed than here. The extremes of great wealth and pinching poverty do not present themselves in this community. There are not three millionaires in the population, but there are thousands in comfortable and prosperous circumstances, and nearly seventy-five per cent. of mechanics and employes own their homes and are putting by money in building associations. There is almost an entire absence of class distinctions, owing, doubtless, to the fact that the population stands so nearly on the same financial level. The even distribution of wealth gives to the population a permanence and stability possessed by no other large city, and has insured to Indianapolis a peaceful and law-abiding community which has made her greatly envied by other cities. Popular disturbances, usual to large American cities, are here infrequent and have been free from the bloodshed that accompanies them elsewhere.

A GREAT RAILROAD CENTER.

Indianapolis is the city nearest the center of population in the United States and nearest the center of the great railroad and commercial systems. It has for years been a convenient and popular meeting-place for organizations of an inter-state and national nature. The hospitable character of its citizens has done much to bring such gatherings here, but the greatly increased hotel accommodations will insure even more extended recognition in the future. The present hotel equipment of this city is of magnificent proportions, giving capacity to entertain any gathering that is likely to be called together in this country for many years to come. Previous to 1893 there was doubt as to whether this city could entertain a national convention of one of the dominant political parties, but the manner in which the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was cared for last September wholly dispelled all doubt on that score. The maintaining of the hotels of this city is not dependent upon great gatherings of people at this point, numerous as they may be, but on every-day commercial patronage which naturally comes here by reason of its location as a railroad center.

Fifteen completed lines of railroad enter this city, and these connect with nearly one hundred lines within the State and near its borders. These fifteen lines all bring their passengers into the new Union Station, the handsomest and best arranged structure for the purpose ever erected. From this station one hundred and twenty-five passenger trains arrive and depart every twenty-four hours, carrying a daily average of twenty-five thousand passengers and making this station a scene of perpetual bustle. It is worthy of note that this great throng of people is so well looked after by the officers chosen for that duty that years go by without the slightest accident to a single passenger.

MANUFACTURES AND MERCHANDISE

It is estimated that a population exceeding two millions is directly dependent upon and tributary to the trade of this city. The wholesale houses here are known far and wide for their solid and conservative character and their thorough business integrity. Indianapolis is known everywhere as an honest market for both buyers and sellers. No other city can show so few failures among jobbers during the past twenty-five years, the period in which the wholesale trade of Indianapolis has been built up. There are now over three hundred wholesale houses, with sales aggregating sixty millions a year. Retail houses in the various lines of merchandising number about 1,100. The country tributary to the trade of this city has, during the past ten years, greatly increased in wealth and the county towns have become active, thriving cities, with multiplied wants which this city is called upon to fill. This is not alone true of the natural gas region, the growth of which has been most extraordinary, but of nearly all the territory in which this city is interested.

Over one thousand factories, great and small, are in operation in this city and its suburbs. Their output is distributed all over the United States and territories, while no inconsiderable quantity is shipped to far-off foreign lands. Many of these factories, by the use of natural gas, not only save money on their fuel bills but obtain a superior product to that produced by coal fuel. This is specially noticed in a number of steel products.

The manufactories located in the gas field must necessarily look to this city for most of their supplies and facilities for shipment of their output. While gas fuel is made free in many parts of the gas field, that fact does not overcome the disadvantages under which they do business. Many of them have found it a mistake to have located away from police and fire protection, where common labor is often difficult to obtain and where there is a heavy additional cost in transportation.

THE WELFARE OF THE CITY.

The merchants, manufacturers, bankers and business men of the city support two organizations which are generous rivals in working for the benefit of the city and advertising its advantages far and wide. These are the Board of Trade and the Commercial Club, the last named occupying a new eight-storied stone front building, which is not only an architectural triumph in appearance but is a model of business comfort and convenience. This building was erected by the Club and is owned by it. The Board of Trade also occupies its own building and both organizations are on a solid financial footing.

Years ago it was seen that with the great number of railroads centering here and the constantly increasing freight traffic that it would be necessary to have a belt road to transfer cars from one line to another and to carry them around instead of through the city. All the roads are connected with the Belt, which connects also with the Union tracks and the Union Stock Yards. Over five thousand freight cars pass daily over this Belt and from three to five hundred car-loads of stock are handled daily at these yards.

A great number of large manufacturing enterprises are located on the Belt and find the finest tracking facilities afforded in the country.

STREET RAILROAD FACILITIES.

Visitors never fail to notice the street railroad facilities here and the comparisons that follow are always complimentary to the Indianapolis lines. The Citizen's Street Railroad Company's lines extend to every part of the city and to the following suburbs: Brightwood, Mapleton, North Indianapolis, Haughville, Mount Jackson, West Indianapolis and Irvington. The entire population of the city and its suburbs is brought in direct and speedy connection with the wholesale and retail and manufacturing precincts.

On January 1, 1894, the company had eighty-one miles of electric road and sixteen miles of animal power. On January 1, 1893, there were twenty-five miles of electrically equipped road and fifty miles of animal power. The difference between indicates the great work that has been done in twelve months. The equipment of the lines is rapidly being brought up to the best standard known in street railway art. Fifty new vestibule cars were put on early in 1894. The property is bonded at four millions of dollars and capitalized at five millions. The total number of men on the pay-roll varies, ranging from seven hundred to eight hundred, including extras. During the past year the company was the largest employer of labor in the city, employing, in addition to the car-running force, over 1,500 men, the latter in construction alone.

The present transfer ticket is the most liberal in use in the United States, except the one used in Rochester, N. Y., which is exactly like it, and allows transfer from every line to every line. This liberal system of transfer extends to the suburban lines. During the present year the system will be made electric throughout and when this is done there will be no city in the world with as complete a system of street railway lines and so admirably adapted to the needs of the community it serves as Indianapolis.

MATERIAL IMPROVEMENT.

Notwithstanding that 1893 was everywhere held to be a year of depression, this city went forward in its course of material improvement, its progress being marked both by great public and private enterprises. Many miles of new streets and sewers were made, the work being continued far into the winter when such work usually is suspended. Many miles of handsome concrete sidewalks were laid, while others for the present year were planned sufficient to make this, when the work is completed, the best furnished in beautiful and durable sidewalks of any city in the West. Several large and expensive buildings have been completed during the past year. Among these may be mentioned the new City Library, an example of pure classic architecture that is greatly admired and is embellished by a bronze group which adds yet more to its beauty; the handsome building of the Socialer Turn-Verein, on Michigan street near New Jersey, and the County Prison, on South Alabama street. Among the handsome business blocks erected during the year may be mentioned W. B. Burford's block on Pearl street and the Cordova building on West Washington street. The number of business blocks and private residences erected while not up to the standard of the previous year, was in every way creditable to the push and enterprise of the city. It should be remarked that Indianapolis, unlike most cities, depends but little on foreign capital in making her business buildings, and her business property, like the residence property, is owned here and is not numbered among the assets of foreign loaning associations.

HEALTH, BEAUTY, CONVENIENCE.

Indianapolis is a city of health, beauty and convenience. The broad streets lined with magnificent shade trees are the admiration of all visitors. The pure atmosphere, clear and smokeless because of the almost universal use of natural gas fuel, is also a matter of frequent favorable comment. Pure water, pure air and an entire absence of the tenement house system usual to large cities combine to cut down the percentage of deaths to a remarkable low figure. Its school system is acknowledged everywhere and by the highest authorities to be the best in the United States. The school buildings are all modern, conveniently located and arranged, and of substantial character. There are two high schools, thirty-six buildings for the lower grades, 375 teachers and 21,200 enrolled scholars. The maintaining of these schools costs $400,000 a year. Butler University, at Irvington, connected with the city by electric railroad, is an institution of which the State may well be proud. Its corps of professors and tutors is complete and embraces the highest educational talent. Irvington is the most attractive suburb of the city and the spacious grounds about the University are beautiful. Irvington is noted for its handsome residences, well shaded avenues and picturesque drives.

Indianapolis has long been known as a city of churches and several new ones have been built during the past year. The churches now number 152, representing an investment of over $10,000,000, with a membership of 40,000 and a Sunday-school attendance of 35,000.

The fuel supply of the city and its suburbs is unsurpassed. Indianapolis, the metropolis of the State, the political, financial and social center of Indiana, stands on the border of the largest continuous district of gas-bearing land in the world, comprising over twenty thousand square miles, an area that has been tested by thousands of gas wells, the tests giving ample demonstration that the supply is inexhaustible. Three lines penetrate this wonderful field from this city—the Consumers' Trust, the Indianapolis Natural Gas Company and the Manufacturers' Natural Gas Company, the last named being, as its name indicates, for supplying manufacturing enterprises exclusively. The saving to private consumers by the use of this fuel is not less than a million dollars a year, while the cleanliness and convenience experienced in its use are beyond computation in dollars and cents.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND PARKS.

Indianapolis takes pride in the public buildings within her borders. The greatest of these is the State House, a marvel of beauty and solidity which cost, built with the most scrupulous care and most exacting honesty, $2,000,000; a County Court House, $1,600,000; Tomlinson Hall, in which all large popular assemblages meet, capable of seating nearly 5,000 persons; a new Union Station, $1,000,000; the finest Soldiers' Monument in the world, costing nearly half a million, and towering to such a height that it can be seen for miles; the Central Hospital for the Insane, with 1,600 patients and nearly 400 employes, a little city in itself; the State Institute for the Blind; the State Institute for the Deaf and Dumb; the Women's Prison and State Reformatory for Women and Girls; a City Hospital the equipment of which is second to none in the West. There is great activity in medical and surgical art and there are a dozen sanitoriums in which patients are cared for. In the residence portions of the city the houses are not crowded together as in most cities. Each residence, from the stateliest mansion to the humblest cottage has its own front and back yards separating it from its neighbors. In most of the streets all fences have been removed, thus permitting the beautiful and well kept lawns to join together. This gives a succession of little parks and makes a favorable impression upon visitors.

The city is now beginning to pay more attention to the subject of public parks. There are three public parks north of Washington street. They are small but are pretty breathing spots. These are Military, Blind Asylum and University Parks, the first named and largest containing fourteen acres, the others being the dimensions of a single city square bounded by four streets.

On the southern edge of the city is Garfield Park, a tract containing over eighty acres. This is now being adorned and beautified. It bids fair to be a place of exceeding beauty, as the ground has great natural advantages. The tract is gracefully rolling, a good part of it covered with native forest trees. There are broad driveways, winding walks for pedestrians and rustic seats for the weary. Among the attractions is a good-sized and very pretty lake formed by the confluent waters of Pleasant Run and Bean Creek, two picturesque little streams that meander through the park from east to west.

There are also two large parks on the north side of the city which, though open to the public, are of private ownership. One of these is the Armstrong Park and the other Fairview Park, the last named being the property of the Citizens' Street Railroad Company. The company is constantly adding to the attractions of this place, which has great natural beauty and is capable of a high degree of adornment. This park is a succession of delightful wooded knolls, which rise above the valley which is to the west and north and overlook a most charming prospect of water, fields, meadows and woodland.

BANKS AND FINANCE.

The city has four national banks, Indiana National, Merchants' National, Meridian National and Capital National, and three private banks, S. A. Fletcher & Co., the State Bank of Indiana and the Bank of Commerce. These institutions have an aggregate capital of $5,000,000 and transact business on the most conservative principles. Indianapolis has no savings bank for the wage earner, its place being taken by building and loan associations which, thus far, have been signally safe and profitable to investors. During the past ten years these institutions have added hundreds of thousands of dollars to the tangible wealth of the community and have built up scores of new additions with cosy and beautiful homes for working people. These associations now exceed one hundred and their aggregate capital is $10,000,000.

FIRE AND POLICE.

The fire and police departments of Indianapolis have been wholly removed from political influences and are now strictly non-partisan. The head of these two branches of the public service is the Board of Public Safety, consisting of three members, only two of whom may belong to the same political party. The membership of the two forces is divided equally between the two great political parties. The effect of this policy in the fire department has been especially good, and the department has an efficiency second to none in the country. The force is small considering the area it is required to protect, the territory being about twenty-one square miles. During the past year this city has had no large or disastrous fires. The streets are wide and only twice in the history of the city has a fire succeeded in crossing a street. There are seven steam engines, three chemical engines, eleven hose wagons, thirteen buildings, 150 miles of fire-alarm wire, 150 fire-alarm boxes, hose, etc. The Indianapolis Water Company (the Holly system) has increased the size of its mains during the year and added materially to the facilities for the protection of property. This company also furnishes the private as well as the public supply of water. Indianapolis has a better supply of pure water than any city of its size, or larger, in the United States. It is clear, sparkling and beautiful, showing under the investigation of the chemist the highest degree of excellence.

INDEBTEDNESS, IMPROVEMENTS.

The negotiable indebtedness of the State of Indiana is less than $3,000,000; the indebtedness of Marion county is about $1,500,000, and that of the city of Indianapolis about $1,400,000. There is a constitutional limitation to the indebtedness of the county and the city. The rate of taxation on property in this city for State, county and city purposes is only $1.67 on the hundred dollars.

Up to date the following is an exhibit of the length in miles of all permanently improved streets in the city:

Streets paved with asphalt.....	17.64 miles
Streets paved with brick.....	10.56 miles
Streets paved with cedar block...	1.90 miles
Streets paved with macadam.....	2.28 miles

The work completed in 1893 in permanent street improvements was as follows:

	Miles.	Cost.
Asphalt streets.....	7.14	$597,024.89
Brick streets.....	3.42	168,201.69
Total	10.53	$865,226.68

REAL ESTATE VALUES.

By the original plat of the city, which embraced four sections of land, the lots were made 67½ feet front by 195 (some 202½ feet) deep, and have always been valued by the front foot. If valued by the square foot, as such property is valued in most cities, comparison would show that property is much cheaper here than in other cities of like population. The highest value that the best business property has attained, independent of improvements, is $2,000 a front foot, about equal to $10 a square foot. Second-class business property is worth from $500 to $750 a front foot, and the best dwelling property from $75 to $200 a front foot. Residence property adjoining the city limits is valued at from $500 to $2000 an acre, while manufacturing sites along the line of the Belt Railroad can be had at from $250 to $500 an acre. The reason that property within the city limits can be had for such low figures is on account of the city having been located on a level plain, with facilities for growth in all directions, and no one is compelled to pay an exorbitant price for a choice location on account of being hemmed in by river, hills or swamps, as is the case in some cities. Rapid transit facilities in this city now make the matter of distance of little consideration, distance being no longer a matter of miles but rather of a few short minutes.

The map of Indianapolis which forms a part of this Directory will be found in every way accurate. It gives the city with all the recent additions up to date. A corrected street directory will be found at the bottom of the map.

The value and importance of a City Directory meet with universal acknowledgment. In a city like this were the publication of such a work to go over for a single year the annoyance and inconvenience that would arise would be simply incalculable.

We feel confident, having given our best thought and energy to the preparation of this volume, that in systematic arrangement it is all that could be desired, and that the information it contains may be thoroughly relied upon in every particular.

We desire to express to our patrons our grateful and sincere thanks for their cordial support and encouragement, without which we would not have achieved the success that has attended our work.

We have in our office, Nos. 23 and 24 Journal Building, a complete library of Directories of all the principal cities of the United States to the use of which we invite our patrons.

BORROWERS

WE RECEIVE many complaints from our patrons to the effect that they are bothered so much by BORROWERS. These parties are not the private citizen nor the stranger in the city, who steps in, looks at the Directory and goes out, but merchants, business and professional men, who need a Directory every day of the year, yet who are too close-fisted to buy one.

These same individuals are the ones that borrow your Directory "just for a minute," which, in the majority of cases, means a day or perhaps a week, unless you remember that they have it and send for it.

These same borrowers will tell the Directory canvasser that he has "no use for a Directory," that he "knows everybody," and, vice versa, "everybody knows him."

DIRECTORY

BORROWERS

WE RECEIVE many complaints from our patrons to the effect that they are bothered so much by BORROWERS. These parties are not the private citizen nor the stranger in the city, who steps in, looks at the Directory and goes out, but merchants, business and professional men, who need a Directory every day of the year, yet who are too close-fisted to buy one.

These same individuals are the ones that borrow your Directory "just for a minute," which, in the majority of cases, means a day or perhaps a week, unless you remember that they have it and send for it.

These same borrowers will tell the Directory canvasser that he has "no use for a Directory," that he "knows everybody," and, vice versa, "everybody knows him."

DIRECTORY

BORROWERS

WE RECEIVE many complaints from our patrons to the effect that they are bothered so much by BORROWERS. These parties are not the private citizen nor the stranger in the city, who steps in, looks at the Directory and goes out, but merchants, business and professional men, who need a Directory every day of the year, yet who are too close-fisted to buy one.

These same individuals are the ones that borrow your Directory "just for a minute," which, in the majority of cases, means a day or perhaps a week, unless you remember that they have it and send for it.

These same borrowers will tell the Directory canvasser that he has "no use for a Directory," that he "knows everybody," and, vice versa, "everybody knows him."
